

THE AMERICAN MALACOLOGICAL SOCIETY
2007
STUDENT RESEARCH GRANT COMPETITION

The American Malacological Society is pleased to announce that applications are now being accepted for the 2007 Student Research Grant Competition. These grants are intended to support thesis or dissertation research involving mollusks by a student enrolled in an advanced degree program. The sponsored research is expected to result in a peer-reviewed publication.

- ✓ One or more grants will be awarded each year, subject to availability of funds. No single grant shall exceed US$1000.00.
- ✓ Awardees are requested to present the results of their research at the annual American Malacological Society meeting.
- ✓ The applicant must be a member of the American Malacological Society.

Applications must include:

1. A two-page summary of the proposed research, including the title, goals, methods, timetable, plans for publication, and a budget specifying the need for the grant. If necessary, the Literature Cited section may occupy a third page. Possession of any necessary permits should be noted.
2. A one-page curriculum vitae.
3. Confirmation that the student is currently enrolled in an accredited college or university.
4. A letter of support via email from the student's advisor.

Submissions should be sent electronically to JVoight@fmnh.org. Applicants are requested to send a single electronic file (either in a common word-processor format such as Word or as a PDF file) containing the first three parts of the proposal (see above). The file's title should be the applicant's last name and 'AMS', e. g. SmithAMS.doc.

If a postal application is necessary, four hard copies of the applications should be sent to:
Dr. Janet Voight
Department of Zoology
The Field Museum
1400 S. Lake Shore Drive
Chicago, IL 60605 USA

Applications must be received by April 1, 2007.
